

Octavio Bessa Jr. M.D.

July 26, 1931 - May 17, 2020

As far as my Dad being a doctor, every patient that came to him was in need of some sort of medical help. At one point in time did a doctor become more than a trusted friend who visited and treated the ill? What's wrong with death? What are so mortally afraid of? Why can't we treat death with a certain amount of humanity and dignity and decency? Every human being has an impact on another? Why do we want that in the patient-doctor relationship? A doctor's mission is not just to prevent death, but also to improve the quality of life! Octavio wanted to be a doctor with all his heart so he could help others! He shared the lives of patients and staff members at the hospitals. He laughed with them and cried with them. That's what he wanted to do with his life! and with God as his witness, he still tried to become the best doctor the world has ever seen! We know that when he passed away, his heart was open, and his eyes were closed. We can only hope that when we get to some final resting place, and happen to wake up next to a certain wall with a gate, that our father is there to vouch for us, and "show us the ropes" on the other side!!

“ Meu pai era um homem bom, talvez um homem teimoso, mas acho que no fundo ele amava todos os seus filhos junto com sua esposa e ele era um excelente médico, é isso que devemos lembrar sobre ele, que meu pai descanse em paz

“ My father was a good man, perhaps a stubborn man, but I think deep down he loved all his children along with his wife and he was an excellent doctor, that's what we must remember about him may my father rest in peace!!
