“ When I was younger, my parents sent my siblings and me to Florida in the summers to spend time with my grandparents and Uncle Nate. Uncle Nate is only two months older than me, so we were all very close in age. When I think of Aunt Jamie, these times always come to mind. I remember looking up to her, thinking, "My Aunt Jamie is so cool. She's so pretty," and you could tell she was a strong and independent woman. She drove a comfortable car, and I wanted to be just like her when I grew up. She even smelled good too—her hair so long and luscious, it always smelled amazing. She was the first woman I saw who was all tattooed up. As a little girl, I looked up to many of my aunts; they spent time with me, and I look back and am so thankful for the effort they put in.

When we were in Florida, Aunt Jamie made sure to take us out on some days. I remember her favorite food was pizza; she would take us to her place, get us pizza, and we would just hang out and watch SpongeBob. The first time I ever watched SpongeBob was with her. I truly appreciate the effort she put into spending time with us four rambunctious kids. But we're a family, and that's what we do. I'm grateful for the time and the memories.

To this day, my aunts have shown me the importance of family—the unconditional love we share for each other. It's truly a blessing. Jamie, you're a beautiful badass, and I have no doubt that in the afterlife, your strength, courage, and fierce spirit continue to shine. You're a force to be reckoned with, even beyond this world.
