“ I've heard all my life we never forget our first love. Marty was mine. At the time neither of us was old enough to understand why he couldn't reciprocate, but fate took our hands and joined us together for life as friends. Honestly? That's even better! He was my confidant and my partner in crime... He was my Cousin "Curly" and my Husband "Motel". We sang in a band at the Fair, we managed to always stand near each other in all county or all state competitions (Zippity Doo Dah, right Marty?). We were in plays and singing groups in High School. He showed me how to make a silk purse out of a sow's ear. He always made me feel special, even when he would insist I become a platinum blonde. He showed my daughter and niece's how to wear make up the right way! We shared Garden Parties and endless bottles of red wine while planning adventures we'd take. There were times when our life paths diverged, but somehow we always managed to find each other again. He showed me his love for gardening and I will carry that with me forever. This man endured so much in his life, but somehow, he always managed to smile and had eyes that would light up a room! (Never let them see you crying right my friend?) I will always be grateful for our last visit... we didn't need words to communicate because we've always been connected at the heart. Lately when I catch myself letting tears fall because of how much I miss you, I just try to imagine the beautiful gardens you're creating in Heaven. Thank you for the fire rainbow you sent to me... I know it was you, because those are a rarest of all... just like you.
