“ My family lived next door to Neva & Charlie Wise on Hilltop Drive from when I was about 2 until the age of 9. Steve was like another brother to me and my siblings. We probably played with him almost every day. The memories and stories I have are absolutely wonderful and precious. We would walk to the General Store on Coshocton Avenue to buy Monkey and Beatle cards (packs with gum in them), candy cigarettes, mini tootsie rolls. We had a neighborhood full of kids, about 15, to play with. Steve and I would take his sister, Barb's, Beatles 45 records and play them on my little turntable. She would get so mad at us but that didn't stop us. Once Steve and I were playing in the pine trees between our houses, in our "fort", and we lit a match and started the dry needles on fire which quickly turned into a much bigger problem. He jumped in and put the fire out, beating it with his arms, getting burns. He told his mom that we had put his arms on the hot trash barrel at the back of the yard to explain the burns. We never told anyone that until we were much older. Our relationship changed somewhat when my family moved away but we celebrated many family milestones together, like Barb's wedding, our graduations and several birthdays. I know Steve had his struggles in life (as we all do) but I wanted his family to have some of his history and I wanted to share a time of innocence that those of us who cared about him had with him. I'm providing some of the pictures I have of my time with Steve for future generations. I think about Steve often and will miss knowing there will be no more memories to share.
