“ Wolfgang was a kind, compassionate and correct teacher, and without his expertise and persistence I would not have been able to achieve my goal of succeeding in dressage. Even now I always say "what would Wolfgang do" when I'm riding Magellan and need guidance. In the beginning, he would coach me at my shows, but later on I remember when I was showing and he wouldn't be there(he said I didn't need him to be there) and then I'd see him standing way off watching me in the arena. As soon as I made my final halt and salute, he would slip away(not un-noticed lol) I can say with all certainty that he made me a better rider and trainer, and taught me the importance of praising the horse and rewarding him for working for me. No finer trainer or rider has ever breathed, and he was a loyal and dear friend for many years. He will be an important part of my life, as long as I breathe in the smell of leather and horses, and pursue the art of perfection which is dressage~

“ Wolfgang was, and always will be, larger than life. He was a master in training dressage and riding, and his greatest gift was passing on his knowledge. He enjoyed gardening and cooking, and liked to spoil his friends with gourmet dinner. He knew the value of real friendship and was a fiercely loyal friend, who would go to all lengths to help out when needed. Looking back on all these years, I'm blessed to have had him in my life.

“ Wolfgang added so much to our lives by sharing his sensitivity and wisdom. He was a brilliant horseman, always kind, always patient with the horses, We learned so much and am completely grateful we shared times together.

“ The world will be a little less colorful without Wolfgang in it. He'll not be forgotten, nor the knowledge he imparted, nor the good times we had.

“ My most favorite teacher.... know he is riding high in a better place now. I will cherish his dressage knowledge he gave me.....
